Many Angolan companies registered their domain directly with DNS.AO, Angola's national domain registry, and over time want to move it to a provider that handles everything in one place - domain, hosting and e-mail. That is possible, and the site does not go down while it happens.

What you gain

1 Renewals and hosting on the same invoice and in the same panel, instead of separate processes.

2 Immediate DNS management from the panel, without requesting changes by e-mail.

3 Automatic expiry notices - the most common reason a domain is lost is simply that nobody noticed the date.

How to request it

1 Check that the registrant details held at DNS.AO are correct and that you can read the contact e-mail. Without that, the transfer cannot be confirmed.

2

Ask us for the transfer, giving the domain - see also how to transfer a domain for the general process.

3

We handle the request with DNS.AO and confirm with you, before going ahead, what is payable and the new renewal date.

4

While it runs, the site and e-mail keep working - nothing is switched off during a transfer.

Do this before the domain is close to expiring. A transfer requested at the last minute may not complete in time, and an expired domain is far harder (and more expensive) to recover than to transfer.

Not sure where it is registered? Send us the domain and we'll check it against the national registry for you.
