The short answer: a local service business needs a site that answers four questions quickly: where it is, when it opens, what it costs and how to book. It is a light site, and one of the first shared plans is enough. What counts most in being found is the Google Business Profile, not the plan.

What weighs, and what does not

Part of the site	What to do
Hours and address	As text , at the top and the bottom, and the same as on Google. When the hours change (holidays), change them in both places.
Prices	A simple table, in text. A photo of a price list cannot be read on a phone or by Google.
Bookings	By phone, WhatsApp or a form. An online booking system is an extra, not a beginning: Putting WhatsApp on your site .
Photos	Of the space and the work done. Use your own, with permission from whoever appears: Photos for your website .
Reviews	They are what convinces a new customer: Reviews and reputation .

How to choose, step by step

1

Create the Google Business Profile first, with hours, address and phone: Being found on Google.

2

Make a one-page site (or a few) with the four answers at the top.

3

Put call and WhatsApp buttons, big, on the phone.

4

Create an e-mail on your own domain for quotes and suppliers.

5

Review the plan only if the site starts having online sales or a customer area.

An outdated site does more harm than no site: wrong hours, an old price, a promotion from two years ago. Review it when what you offer changes and at least once a year.

For businesses that live on customers from the area, what brings most people is showing up on the map and in “near me” searches. Focus on that before spending on a complicated site.
