By the Interweb editorial team · Updated 15 October 2026 · Data from the providers' public pages, consulted in October 2026.

Choosing a provider in Angola has its own difficulty: there are few, and their pages nearly all say the same. These are the questions that tell them apart.

The seven points that decide it

- 1 Do they register .ao domains? That is the first filter. A provider that does not forces you to handle the domain elsewhere.

- 2 Do they charge in kwanzas? A price in a foreign currency is not a fixed price.

- 3 Do they issue an invoice your accountant accepts?

- 4 Which panel do they use? cPanel and Plesk make leaving easier; a proprietary panel locks you in more.

5

How do backups work - frequency, retention, and whether restoring costs.

6

What hours does support answer, and through which channel.

7

What is the renewal price, not the promotional one.

What exists in Angola today

1

DNS.AO - not a hosting provider: it is the national registry for the .ao zone, under INFOSI. That is where the zone is managed and where companies get accredited as registrars. See registering a .ao: at DNS.AO or through a provider .

2

AngoHost - advertises hosting in Angola, .AO domains and VPS.

3

Interweb - hosting with cPanel, free SSL, backups every night before dawn kept for a year, .ao domains, invoices in kwanzas and support in Portuguese: WhatsApp, ticket and e-mail 24 hours, phone from 08:00 to 16:00.

Checked on each provider's public pages in August 2026. They may have changed since - confirm before deciding.

The test worth more than any page

Before buying from anyone, send a technical question to each provider's support. How long they take and how good the answer is tells you more about the next two years than any feature list.

Comparing with foreign providers too makes sense, and is no betrayal. See hosting in Angola or abroad before you decide.
